

PhD in Process: dialogue between Heritage and Technology

Guest Editor: Associate professor PhD Ana Nikezić (Faculty of Architecture, University of Belgrade, Serbia)

Papers due: 31 January 2023

The third issue in the 'PhD in Process' series explores the dialogue between Heritage and Technology through an interdisciplinarity approach to the theme at hand.

The term Heritage is not only seen through the established definition of cultural heritage as a monument, a group of objects and localities or a museum, but also through a wide range of spatial phenomena and their mutual relations in space as a kind of unifier. The term Technology is seen in relationship with said Heritage, whether its role is in analyzing it, preserving it or promoting it through various forms of hard and soft methodologies.

The relationship between Heritage and Technology grows more complicated each day with the introduction of the ever-evolving digital technologies that allow new approaches to old questions.

"If we can see the present clearly enough, we shall ask the right questions of the past."

- John Berger, Ways of Seeing

SAJ: Serbian Architectural Journal (ISSN 1821 - 3952, e-ISSN 2787-1908) is an international peer-reviewed journal, published in the English language, three times a year since 2009 by the Faculty of Architecture, the University of Belgrade. For more information about the journal, please follow this link. Please note that SAJ is an open-access journal indexed by SCIndeks, where all published papers are available for viewing, reading, and downloading in full text. Though primarily focusing on topics with a background in architecture, urbanism, and urban planning, the SAJ also welcomes interdisciplinary, multidisciplinary, and transdisciplinary research and submissions from various academic disciplines. To submit a paper, kindly go to our Author Guidelines page and follow the instructions provided. Alternatively, if you are familiar with the SAJ publication process, you can submit your paper directly through the Assistant publishing platform. If you do not feel comfortable using the platform, please submit your paper by emailing the Editorial office directly at saj@arh.bg.ac.rs.

For any questions, please do not hesitate to contact the Editorial Office at saj@arh.bg.ac.rs.

