Call for papers – November 2022

Abstract – 23rd of December 2022

Full papers – 28th of February 2023

The issue is intended for regional networks of urban morphology, established within the framework of International seminar of Urban form (ISUF), but also for emerging networks within the field. Papers could be submitted both by individuals or group of authors. Papers will go through double blind peer-review process.

The special issue is a supporting activity of the ISUF 2023 conference and should provide a platform for disseminating regional perspectives on the Praxis of Urban morphology. Praxis is perceived as a process by which theory/idea is enacted, embodied and realized, especially in the thirtieth year of jubilee. It is planned for this special issue to be available in hard copy to all participants at the ISUF 2023 Conference.

Authors are expected to (1) provide insight into the context of urban morphology in specific country/language area/cultural space, (2) elaborate on intellectual heritage, chronologically and systematically, (3) identification of periods/precedents/main topics/paradigms/influences, and (4) perspectives for further action, contemporary influences of the network, main challenges, etc.
